

Jews with Tattoos

KB Goodkin will examine the movement of young hipster Jews who have taken their faith and translated it into visible, permanent declarations of identity through tattooing. During the workshop, we learn the Halakhot (laws) surrounding the prohibition on permanent markings on the body as well as the psychology behind those who have made the choice to go against those traditional ideas. The workshop is fun, interactive, full of interesting images and ideas and intended as informational – it neither condones nor condemns this practice.
